HE READS THE BIBLE

Thiede Seeks Solace from the Holy Book.

HIS HOPE ALMOST GONE

STILL HAS A VAGUE HOPE OF DELIVERANCE.

The Wife Murderer Has But Three Days More to Live—Was Visited Yesterday by His Sister Emma and His Brother-in-Law, Mr. Pearson.

When Charles Thiede awoke yesterday morning, with the first gray glimmering of dawn piercing the dingy corners of his cell, it was with the chilling realization that there remained for him but four more days to live.

He saw through the iron bars the same blurred tree tops, with the bluish mist curling around the distant mountains. He heard close by the metallic clank of the jailer's keys against iron doors.

These were familiar scenes and familiar sounds, almost as much so as the blacked walls of his prison cell. Yet they smote harshly upon him, and brought keenly to his consciousness the swiftness with which he was nearing the end.

Thiede spent the day yesterday very much as he has spent every other day since his confinement. He still clings to a vague hope of deliverance, though his buoyancy of a few days ago has vanished.

During the past day or two he has developed a voracious appetite for reading. He has read the Bible and the New Testament.

Thiede's cell is a small, dark room, with a single window looking out onto the prison yard. The walls are blacked, and the floor is made of concrete.

IT OCCURRED AT GARFIELD

The Girl Taken to St. Mark's Hospital.

She May Die from Her Injuries—If She Recovers from the Shock, Amputation May Be Necessary—How the Accident Occurred.

Laura Larsen, a girl aged 14, who resides at Bingham Junction, met with a frightful accident at Garfield yesterday afternoon.

The girl went out to the beach with the Young Recruits' band excursion, and enjoyed herself in the usual way with the others until one of the trains pulled in during the afternoon. After the passengers had alighted, she boarded one of the cars at the station and rode out to the Y, where the train headed about and returned.

Whether the girl merely intended to alight and join the crowd at the pavilion or whether she dropped something and jumped out after it is not known, but she got off at the west end of the bower, while the train was in motion. It is supposed that her clothing caught, as she fell, and was dragged a short distance, but did not get under the wheels until just before the train stopped. It was time enough, however, for the left leg to be frightfully mangled, the flesh being stripped from the bone.

The injuries were temporarily dressed and the sufferer was conveyed to St. Mark's hospital as quickly as possible. The effects of the shock were such that it was deemed unwise to attempt any examination until the patient had rallied somewhat.

An examination by Dr. Behl at the hospital last evening developed a compound fracture of the right hip and a dislocation of the right shoulder. In addition to this her leg was badly injured and the limb from the knee down.
